Milks "Walking Dairy" At Customers' Doorsteps; Finds Business Growing

WAYNESBORO, Pa., Jan. 23.—A "walking dairy" is the innovation of Sherd Cresser, a farmer and stock dealer. He not only serves milk at the door fresh from the cow, but brings the cow along and draws the milk while his customers wait. He carries his milking stool, bucket and tin measure along and does the milking at the curb in front of the home of the customer.

Sherd says his customers have many advantages from his system as the milk comes not only direct and warm from the cow, but is sure to be absolutely free of water.

'BROKEN BLOSSOM' MOTHER IS SOUGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Lieut. John H. Ayres, in charge of the Bureau of Missing Persons of the Police Department, and his men are searching today for the young mother calling herself a "Broken Blossom," who left her black traveling bag in the Grand Central Station.

The bag was picked up in mistake for his own by Robert F. Bohland, of Bridgeport, Conn. Unharmed by its four-hour trip in the smoking car to Bridgeport, the baby cried lustily when Mr. Bohland opened what he supposed was his bag. He believes the mother exchanged bags while he was buying a ticket in New York.

Eight Weeks Old. A letter found in the bag said the boy was eight weeks' old and that the mother had been deserted by the father of the child.

While the police are searching for her, the mother of the nameless infant is thought to be in Chicago.

Saying she was in search of her lost baby boy, a stylishly dressed woman called at the ward in Hillside Home, at Bridgeport, where the baby is being cared for, and asked to see the child.

Miss Florence Wagner, a nurse, took her to the infant's crib. The woman looked at "Broken Blossom" a few moments, shook her head and left the hospital, refusing to give her name. She said she lived in Stamford.

Several persons have asked to be allowed to adopt the baby.

No Clues To Identity. An examination of the baby has yielded no clue to his identity. The woman, which his mother exchanged at Grand Central Station for the bag of Robert F. Bohland, bore no manufacturer's or dealer's name.

All transcontinental trains, particularly of the Pennsylvania system, were watched by the police of a dozen cities. Bobbie's mother, in the letter left with her child, said she was going to California. The New York police, who are co-operating with the Bridgeport authorities, believe this may have been written to confuse the search.

The suit case, in which the child was carried four hours, is black, and punctured at the top and sides with small round holes. There are no distinguishing marks on the baby's body. Florence Wagner, chief nurse of the Hillside Home, said the baby was one of the healthiest she had ever seen.

U. S. PLANS AIR ROUTE FROM N. Y. TO ALASKA

Twenty-four Scheduled Landings Over Distance of 4,871 Miles.

An overland aviation route from New York to Nome, Alaska, has been plotted by the training and operations group of the Army Air Service, with a view of flying over this route in the near future, the air service announced today.

The route covers a distance of 4,871 miles, with twenty-four scheduled landing fields and ten emergency stops. The route crosses the Canadian border between North Gate, North Dakota, and North Portal, Saskatchewan. The Canadian-Alaskan border is crossed at Inlet Ekbert. The main stops include Cleveland, Chicago, St. Paul-Minneapolis, Fargo, Regina, Saskatchewan; Saskatoon, Edmonton, Alberta; Fort George, British Columbia; Telegraph Creek, Selkirk, Dawson, Fort Yukon, Fort Gibbon, Nulato, and Nome.

The entire route is divided into jumps of not more than 282 miles, the average being about 175 miles. The route follows the new Grand Trunk Pacific railway from Edmonton, Alberta, to Prince Rupert, British Columbia. At Hazelton, British Columbia, the proposed route branches north between the coast range and the Rockies, following the valleys, the most populated way, the one least likely to be covered with fog, the one having the established telegraph line from Hazelton to Whitehorse, and the one most favorable from a supply point of view.

ROUGED LIPS AND LOW WAISTS FROWNED UPON

Denver High School Boys to Ostracize Girls Who "Doll Themselves Up."

DENVER, Jan. 23.—Now come the boy students of Denver's South Side High School to put a crimp in the prosperity of Denver beauty shops.

Recently Miss Anne McKean Shuler, woman dean of the University of Denver, issued a ukase forbidding the co-ed at that institution using powder puffs. Miss Shuler declared that a beautiful new rug that adorned the floor in front of a large mirror in the women's study at the university was becoming "horribly ragged" because so many girl students lingered in front of the mirror to use their powder puffs. Also, she said, men students breezing through the corridors can see the undignified performance.

At a meeting of the Mothers' Congress and Parent-Teachers' Association a report was read from the boys of South Denver High School denouncing the follies of girl students who "doll themselves up" in drug-store complexions, and issuing a warning that youthful schoolgirls who appear in class room attired like chorus beauties will be ostracized from social functions.

"No lips that are rouged, no cheeks that bloom like a drug-store blush will appear at a dance with us," the boys told the mothers' congress.

Among other things taboo by the boys are: Bobbed hair, vanity cases, short skirts, low-cut waists, flimsy hosiery.

$37,500 FOR HUBBY IN 'HONEY GIRL' SUIT

Jury Returns Record Verdict Against Wealthy Manufacturer.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 23.—Probably the largest verdict ever rendered in a similar case in a Philadelphia court was the award of $37,500 in the famous "Honey Girl" alienation suit by a jury in common pleas court yesterday.

The jury returned the verdict against Horace G. Fetterolf, wealthy Philadelphia rug manufacturer, and in favor of Laurence O'Loane, Boston traveling salesman, to console him in the loss of his wife's love, and the disruption of his home.

For three hours the jury deliberated on the testimony, including the "Honey Girl" letters which Fetterolf had written the Boston man's wife, after she had left her home and was living in apartments in New York.

Mrs. Mabel O'Loane, "silver blonde," wife of the Boston salesman, and star witness against Fetterolf, hurried to the office of her husband's attorney as soon as she learned that a verdict had been reached.

The woman, who was scorned by her "Fetty" after he had tired of her, sank to a chair. She covered her face in her hands for several minutes.

Then she looked up, her doll-like face flushed, and her dark eyes gleaming.

"I did Laury a very, very great wrong," she said, "but I was infatuated with Fetty. I would have gone to Fetty without any money. I never threatened him with blackmail, and I never intended to go to his wife and family with the story of our love."

"My sympathy is with his wife. She has suffered. But I have suffered, too. My wrong was from the heart. I learned only too late that Fetty didn't mean what he said to me. I was too trusting and believed him. He has got a just punishment. So have I, for I must go through life with my head held down."

"If you don't call in the doctor until you're half dead probably he can't do much for you."
